THE ZEN OF DADDY

OFF THE TOP

BY PAT CALIFIA

sexual outlaws receive for making their difference public. Outcasts (whether they are prison inmates, refugees, orphans, or queers) try to find new ways to link up with each other, recreate networks of obligation and affiliation that resemble the family, and thus find a place where they belong.

Among leather folk in particular, one of the most popular ways to establish such bonds is through Daddy fantasies—the conscious creation, via erotic play, of a new, nonbiological family within the subculture of self-aware perverts. Somebody who says, “I am Daddy Irwin’s boy,” for instance, is not advertising regression or irresponsibility; he is telling you that he has an established role in the world he chose over his birth-family. It is a statement of pride, a badge of membership.

Daddy/boy fantasies are about unfinished business; about integrating the vulnerable child-self with the adult ego and libido; and about receiving what we truly need from our partners and caretakers. In the leather community, Daddy has become so popular that he threatens to eclipse Master as an honorific for the one who is (usually) running the fuck. I believe this is because Daddy/boy role-playing meets needs that SM roles are less likely to satisfy. A Daddy is more accessible, flexible, and loving than a master or a sadist. A Daddy/boy scene is also more likely to include genital sex than an SM scene. And there is less codification of the Daddy role. A T-shirt that says, “Even Daddies Need a Daddy” makes instant sense to anyone, but a T-shirt that says, “Even Masters Need a Master” (no matter how true) would be off-putting.

The popularity of the Daddy role may also be evidence that butchness has been detached from heterosexuality and even from the male gender. It would be wrong, however, to say that there is no connection at all between butch identity and manhood. For one thing, you do not receive either status by default. You have to want it, and you have to struggle for it. Your success or failure is evaluated rather harshly by a jury of your peers. Butches (and, by extension, daddies) are also judged by the degree to which they are able to do what we usually think of as “men’s work”: put up a shelf, change the oil in the car, initiate a sexual encounter, make your partner come, pick up heavy things, administer first aid, put on a tie, install snow chains on the tires, talk to repairmen, and defend the people they love against verbal or physical attacks.

And yet the true essence of masculinity is the choice to be gentle even when one is stronger than others; to care for one’s dependents and nurture the young; to devise rites of passage and train our charges to pass through them successfully; to work hard and perform well; to provide food even in a time of scarcity; to deal with problems or emergencies in a courageous and effective manner; to mount a defense and, if necessary, get hurt or even die in the process of protecting the people who depend upon you. For many of us who have eroticized Daddyhood, these are precisely the qualities that we long to provide to (or to receive from) those with whom we form bonds of love and sexuality.

There is another reason why Daddy has become a sexual icon of such intriguing proportions. One of the most terrible things that AIDS has done is to threaten to sever the connection between generations of gay men. The bathhouse culture of the 1970s has been scapegoated for AIDS, as if a malignant virus sprang out of a bottle of poppers to punish all those handsome young men for being too preoccupied with carnality, too obsessed with multiplying their sexual possibilities, partners, and sensations. Most of the men who could have explained first-hand what was important about the world of backroom bars, steam rooms, baths, and meat racks were among the first victims of the epidemic. For most of the 1990s, it was anathema to defend the baths or mourn for the unprecedented queer freedom, brotherhood, kindness, affirmation, and care that many, many men found there.

Fortunately, there is a generation of younger gay men now coming out who are curious about that part of their history. Many of them have never been able to attend so much as a J/O party because many of the institutions that make group sex or casual sex available don’t exist any more. Daddy/boy relationships come out of a deep need to mend the fragile connection between older and younger gay men. They are one aspect of a healthy and vital desire to pass on the stories, experiences, sexual skills, and erotic wisdom that the larger society would be happy to disown and destroy. The older men who are daddies are the new sexual heroes of this decade, because they have survived with hard-ons, an evil twinkle in their eyes, hearts that were made to scrape the tender hair off a boy’s round butt, big hands, belts, and boots that need a proper polishin’.

But there’s no end to the childhood scripts that lead us to want Daddy to take us into his big, strong arms. And it’s no surprise that so many boys whose fathers harassed or beat them for being cocksuckers have turned the tables on that mean old man and found reassurance, comfort, fun, and a lot of cum in the arms of masculine queer men they call Daddy. Dear old dad the fagbasher has become a big old cocksucker himself.

And yet why do these scenarios make some of us hard or wet or both? Are they just toxic waste from growing up in the heterosexual nuclear family? Perhaps a better question would be how so much rich, potentially explosive material from our family histories of first loves, fierce attachments, and equally fierce rejections could ever escape being eroticized.

Sexual ennui, on the other hand, is often the result of locking our lips when our hearts and crotches are telling us to say something forbidden—whether that’s “Hurt me” or “You bitch” or “Fuck me harder, Daddy!” Even in an age of artificial insemination, adoption, and divorce, Daddy will never be obsolete. ■ “Off The Top” is an editorial opinion piece. It serves as a community forum about a variety of controversial issues. The viewpoints and information shared is that of the author, and do not necessarily reflect the editorial position of Drummer magazine.

Fantastic Realities, Unltd., her crew, and Desmondus, Inc. While the non-leather crowd made muffled rumblings about this year's theme of "The Inquisition," the leather community was not in the least fazed or offended by it. The ambiance at The Concourse—with its myriad of vendors—was a welcome aside to the proceedings onstage.

Veteran of more leather competitions than anyone could imagine, former IMsL Shan Carr teamed up with bear-type/biker/leatherman Lurch for emcee duties. Shan, with her never-ending catalog of amusing experiences as a leather dyke and standup comedian, is always a crowd-pleaser.

Lurch, in contrast, with his gentle iconoclasm, managed to relate to leathermen in terms not alien to their own experiences, including discourses on the Crisco Hotline, Roadkill Helper, his pet snake Cuddles, and leathermen whose interest in gourmet cooking and opera run contrary to the presence they project when cruising or at play parties. The team-up was a delightful coup for Desmondus, Inc.

But the real stars of any major leather competition are the contestants. After all, why pay all that money for airfare, hotels, food, and drink, if not to be rewarded by witnessing the crème de la crème of the world's hottest leathermen? This year's event was dedicated to the late Mr. Drummer, Emerson Briney (1992). A poignant tribute delivered by Drummer editor Marcus Wonacott elicited a standing ovation in respect of Emerson's high-profile year with the title.

A spectacular opening sequence included contestants garbed in hoods and short, medieval tunics, and heralded the entrance of outgoing Mr. Drummer, Graylin Thornton. Choreography created by Charlie Seltz brought another standing ovation as the introduction of the contestants and the judges began. What a tableau: previous winners and 14 aspirants. The crowd was mesmerized.

The speeches of the contestants were interspersed with fantasies, skits, and interludes that were both overt and symbolic in execution. Comedy sketches always provide a respite from some of the heavier-duty displays. Whereas Graylin Thornton's fantasy last year was sensuous and sexy, this year's winner employed comedy with an attack on Santa Claus that included stuffing his posterior with grossly oversized red and green ben-wa balls! Veteran SM practitioner and writer Pat Califia was spotted with her eyebrows arched almost to the ceiling of the Concourse's cavernous hall. It's not easy getting a rise that high out of La Califia!

Finally (but right on schedule), the moment of truth arrived. Tallymistresses Helen Ruvelas and Phyllis Zusman kept a running total of the scoring, and Jeff Burnam called the contestants back to the stage. Graylin Thornton offered his final words, thanking everyone for their input and help during his reign. Tinged with poignancy and humor, his final task was to announce the runners up and winners.

The Golden Whip Award (akin to butch congeniality status) went to Mr. Northern California Drummer, Leo Lawhorn, and was presented by International Mr. National Leather Association, Mark Frazier.

Tim Cooper of Chicago, judges' slave for three years running, presented this year's John Siracusa Memorial Drummerboy trophy, an honor bestowed by the contestants themselves, to Seattle's Mark Colter. Among the crowd and for the 50-plus Seattle contingent, it was bedlam.

San Jose's International Mr. Leather, Jeffrey Tucker bounced into view to tumultuous applause, bearing the trophy for Mr. Drummer 1st Runner Up. At this point, the intensity was all but unbearable. The East Coast contingent was ecstatic as Mr. Mid-Atlantic Drummer, Gary Weltner, a man of small but dynamic stature, a linguist and former U.N. employee, accepted the trophy.

In a floor-length designer cape, Graylin Thornton strode to center stage, a faintly nostalgic look on his beautiful face as he announced that the 1994 International Mr. Drummer title would be bestowed upon Mr. Rocky Mountain Drummer, Keith Hunt. The highly motivated and enthusiastic 100+ contingent from Colorado savored this victory—10 years in the making.

Throughout all of the political shenanigans being waged against the gay and lesbian community in Colorado, the leather community remained intact while exhausting themselves to raise funds to defeat antigay legislation in their state. Minutes after Keith Hunt was named the winner, bedlam erupted at the Triangle Bar, the long-running leather bar that is the place to be in Denver if you're into leather or leather is into you. How sweet the victory for a thriving leather community that hasn't seen a major title winner since the ascension of Ron Moore as International Mr. Leather in 1984.

Keith Hunt, standing 5'8" and weighing in at 160 pounds, is a fuzzy, mustached leatherman who hails from Oklahoma and is a relative newcomer to Denver. Employed in the restaurant business, he's also a rodeo bull rider, a pursuit not lost on the sensitivities of at least two of the judges who enjoy the sport themselves.

Within days of his victory in Denver as Mr. Rocky Mountain Drummer, Keith was sitting in the office of the mayor of Denver in a major discussion. That meeting resulted in another with the governor of Colorado. Can the Oval Office be his next destination? Not as far-fetched as it may seem.

A major undertaking for and by leather people, Leather Pride Week, International Mr. Drummer, and the Folsom Street Fair were a resounding success. There were marriages made (divorces, too), fun and merriment for all, and leather people everywhere in this tolerant city (and not one arrest for nudity at the Folsom Street Fair!). Next year, perhaps YOU will be one of the celebrants in the Greatest (Leather) Show on Earth. Move over Ringling Brothers! ■

EUROPEAN NEWS

BY JACQUES HAPPE

POPPERS: STILL UNHEALTHY AFTER ALL THESE YEARS?

England is once again facing a poppers ban. Three sex shops, including London's popular Zipperstore, are facing prosecution by the Royal Pharmaceutical Society (RPS) for selling this drug, commonly used both for sex as well as on the dance floor.

Poppers are for sale in many European countries, although they are banned in England. Claiming that popper use may cause Kaposi's sarcoma (KS), a kind of skin cancer that has been associated with AIDS but which is now widely believed to be a separate, sexually transmitted disease, the RPS wants to control the sale of poppers by putting them under Britain's Control of Medicines Act. Controversy has raged for years over the connection between popper use and AIDS/KS, and the AIDS group, Positively Healthy, welcomed news of the RPS's actions.

According to Terence Higgins Trust spokesperson Ruth Parry, however, "banning poppers is not the issue, the issue is safe sex. When people take any kind of drugs, the chance is that they can forget to have safe sex."

If you travel, be aware that it is illegal to bring poppers on board an airplane (amyl nitrate is highly flammable). Poppers cost about £5 in England, between £5.50 and £7 in Holland, and about £10 in France. [Rex Wockner contributed to this item.]

MORE FROM ENGLAND'S SEX POLICE

English police attempted a number of SM-related prosecutions in 1993, including the arrest of a teacher from St. Albans. The teacher, whose home was raided by police in June 1993, was forced to go to court in order to win the return of his seized property, including videos and magazines, and police dropped the charges against him. In the meantime, however, he had been fired from his job. In a related case, police arrested 16 men in South Yorkshire in May 1993 after receiving a false tip that the men were involved in the exchange of stolen goods. When they raided a warehouse in the area, however, the police found 36 men engaged in a private leather-and-rubber-wear party. The men were charged with "conspiracy to commit gross indecency" and are now claiming damages for unlawful arrest and false imprisonment. Solicitors for the police insist that the arrests were lawful.

In Hampstead Heath, meanwhile, London's main gay cruising park, men and women have separate ponds for nude sunbathing. Recently, however, the Corporation of London, which runs the heath, has cut down the amount of space available to nude sunbathers. They said to Pink Paper that they were responding to complaints about nudity from a local resident. When London's gay-activist group OutRage! responded by stripping down at Highgate's clothing-required men's pool last July, police closed the entire pool for a day. Regular pond users accused OutRage! of publicity-seeking and "ruining their day," but OutRage! organizer Peter Tatchell told Capital Gay that their protest marked a "battle between those who have a phobia about male genitals and the rest who have a more enlightened attitude." [Rex Wockner contributed to this news item.]

MR. BOOTS 1994

(BY THOMAS SCHWARTZ)

The number one leather bar in Belgium is Antwerps' The Boots. Golden Shower Parties, Uniform-and-Leather Meetings, and other special events are scheduled there regularly. This summer, The Boots held its very own "Mr. Boots" contest. Outside, the temperatures were hot, but inside—where men were packed into one of Europe's most attractive action spots—the mercury was really on the rise.

On the evening of the contest, The Boots was full of men in leather, jeans, rubber, and uniforms. One group of people had no trouble with the strict dress code: They were, apart from cock rings or a harness, nude. (The easiest way to get by the doorman!)

While they waited for the competition to begin, some men relaxed in one of the leather slings or "hung around" at the Andreas Cross. Memories of the old Mineshaft in New York were probably surfacing for some.... Finally, a second doorman opened the way to a metal staircase, and the contest could begin.

Luc, the pierced and muscular Mr. Boots 1993, was the evening's host. The contest itself was held in English—the main language of Boots—but the international atmosphere was confirmed by the conversations taking place in German, Dutch, and French as well as English.

Seven finalists took the stage, dressed in uniforms and leather. There was one guy in rubber and even a man in a full Scottish kilt! The first requirement in the Mr. Boots final round was oral—the contestants had to blow up a rubber until it popped. After the demolition of the rubbers, a set of pushups were required. A short interview and some fantasies followed, and then contestants were required to throw extra-large cockrings onto a dildo. It isn't as easy as it sounds! (Who actually practices this anyway?)

MR. BOOTS '94 AND 1ST RUNNER UP

In the end, Patrick from Belgium—who had pleased the crowd by pulling off his uniform to reveal a leather jockstrap and a pair of handcuffs—walked away with the 1994 Mr. Boots banner (and a free trip to New York). The rest of us were left to look around the maze of dark rooms and corners for men who were worth a special competition of their own.

The Boots, Van Aerdtsstraat 22, Antwerp, Belgium is open every Friday and Saturday from 22:30 until 5:00. Entrance fee is BF 300 per weekend (f15, DM 14, £5.50, 44). Six-month and annual memberships are available for BF 600 or BF 900, respectively. (Jacques Happe contributed to this item.)

LEATHER- AND SM-CLUB NEWS FROM FAR AND WIDE

InterBike is a new club in Scandinavia for bikers and guys who want to meet bikers. The club is intended to "promote the biking lifestyle" and is open to men from any country. There are no age limits. Information: InterBike, Postboks 232, DK-1502, Copenhagen V, Denmark.

Every first Sunday of the month is De Schouw in Apeldoorn (Spadelaan 8), and every third Sunday at G-Force, Amsterdam's SM café (Oudezijds Armsteeg 7), is an afternoon for young SMers to attend their own PowerParties. Men 35 years old and younger (they're strict at the door) can chat with their peers and practice SM in the playroom in the cellar. Entrance fee is only 10 guilders (£3.70, DM 9.10). At other times, the G-Force is open to anyone, of all ages, who is interested in SM. The MSM group (SM for men) meets every first Sunday afternoon, and every Thursday evening the café hosts a fetish show. After-hour parties are regular events. The bar, located on the street level, is small and set up for informal conversation. Leaflets, catalogs, books, magazines, and flyers are always available. In the cellar, toys and furniture (specially made by our advertiser, SM Tools) are available. New to G-Force is a new area called The Club on the first floor; two playrooms with two dominant ladies or for hire without the girls. Other activities include SM cruises with one of their regulars who owns a boat. Every four weeks a new artist will get the opportunity to show his or her work to the public. Every second Wednesday of the month G-Force presents a SM Show Night (entrance at 20:00 hours, and the fee is 10 guilders). The dress code is leather, rubber, latex, PVC, or all black. If you are intending to go to one of the special events or just want to pay back the bar a visit, remember that it's not a gay bar but is open to all sexual interests. You can find the G-Force in the Oudezijds Armsteeg 7 an alley that starts next to the Stable Master Hotel and Bar in the Warmoesstraat.

One of the newest German leather clubs is the Thüringer Lederclub (TLC). Everyone interested in leather, rubber, jeans, uniforms, and SM and who lives in the Erfurt area should apply for a membership: Thüringer Lederclub (TLC), Postfach 124, 99003 Erfurt, Germany. ■

FUN FAIR AND PARTY UNDER THE STARS

The week-long Fun Fair is one of the Rhine area's main attractions. The Leather Men Düsseldorf club uses this lot, full of rides, beer gardens, candy shops, and more for their annual Gay Monday party, which attracts crowds from all over Germany. Leathermen know how to handle chains, as we all know, but the way the men in leather, uniforms, and rubber worked the chain-driven carousel this year had to be seen to be believed. The next offering of LM Düsseldorf is their Sternchenparty, the Party Under the Stars, November 11-13, 1994. Further info: LM Düsseldorf, Dahlwitz, Box 102005, 40011 Düsseldorf.

NORTHERN LEATHER

It's chilly in the north of Germany at this time of year; so one way to beat the cold is to wrap yourself in leather and visit Leder Club Nord West in Bremen. LCNW Bremen's annual European Confederation of Motorcycle Clubs (ECMC) meeting takes place October 21-23, 1994. You can also meet Bremer (the men of Bremen) at Bronx Bar, Bohnenstrasse 1, every first and third Friday of the month.

UNIFORM

Between 40,000 and 50,000 gay men and lesbians attended this year's Christopher Street Day in Cologne, and about 20,000 joined the parade. In all, some 90,000 visitors made this one of Germany's largest gay celebrations ever. The celebration also gave quite a boost to the membership of Cologne's uniform club, Köln-Oliv. Men in uniform are invited to a workshop at Station, one of Cologne's leather discos, on the second Sunday of every other month, (alternating with The Pierced Men's Group. Info about the men in "oliv" is also available at their meetings at Hands, Mathiasstrasse 22, every first Friday of the month, or write to: LSMA, Postfach 290341, 50525 Köln, Germany.

CHRISTMAS IN LEATHER

It's still some time before Christmas, but if you want to see a real German Christmas market in its historical site (as well as a lot of men in leather), go to Nürnberg. The Nürnberger Leather Club Franken holds meetings at the Christkindles-Markt, one of Nürnberg's main winter attractions, on December 2-4. For details, contact NLC Franken, c/o Walfisch, Jakobstrasse 19, 90402 Nürnberg, Germany.

If you have info for Kraut & Leder, contact Thomas Schwartz at fax 011.49.221.240.3607 (from the USA) or c/o Drummer's international office in Amsterdam. ■

KÖLN OLIV

KIRMESTREFFEN UND STERNCHENPARTY

Das Kirmestreffen der Leather Men Düsseldorf war wieder einmal im dichten Gedränge ein riesiger Erfolg. Zwar schob man sich zwischen Karussell, Riesenrad und Würstchenbuden, aber bei der "Schwarzwald-Christel" traf man Leder-, Gummi, und Jeanskerle in "griffiger" Enge. Sogar einige in Bundeswehruniformen waren darunter. Nach einer rauschenden Fahrt auf dem Kettenkarussell ging es für einige in den Dünen weiter... bis morgens um sechs. Das nächste Treffen der Düsseldorfer, und Anlass für diesen Rückblick, ist die "Sternchenfahrt" vom 11. bis 13. November, die man nicht verpassen sollte. Info darüber durch LM Düsseldorf, Dahlwitz, Postfach 102005, 40011 Düsseldorf.

LEDER IM NORDEN

In der kälteren Jahreszeit kann man sich im Norden besonders gut in Leder verpacken. Ein Besuch bei den Kerlen von Leder Club Nord West in Bremen ist daher angebracht. LCNW organisiert sein jährliches ECMC-Treffen vom 21. bis 23. Oktober. Die Jungs aus Bremen trifft man auch in Bronx, Bohnenstrasse 1 jeden ersten und dritten Freitag im Monat.

UNIFORMEN

Wie bereits berichtet waren zwischen 40.000 und 50.000 bei der CSD in Köln dabei. Dadurch war die Feier unter dem Motto "Flagge zeigen" ein riesiger Erfolg. Auch für Köln-Oliv, der bei dieser Gelegenheit einige neue Mitglieder bekam. Jeden zweiten, ungeraden Sonntag im Monat gibt es ein Treffen mit Spielmöglichkeit im Station. Mehr über die Männer in "Oliv" auch in Hands, Mathiasstr. 22 beim Treff jeden ersten Freitag im Monat. Hier auch info über den kurzfristig geplanten Wechsel der LSMA-Treffen vom Station zu einer anderen Stelle.

WEIHNACHTEN IN LEDER

Es ist zwar noch etwas Zeit bis Weihnachten, aber wenn man wirklich einen richtig "schönen" Weihnachtsmarkt sehen möchte dann heisst es auf nach Nürnberg. Der Leder Club Franken organisiert auch in diesem Jahr das Treffen am Christkindles-Markt vom 2. bis 4. Dezember. Mehr über NLC Franken, c/o Walfisch, Jakobstr. 19, 90402 Nürnberg.

a sex-related BBS while pretending to be an adult. And whether or not the adult on the other end knew that he was talking to someone who was under age, users have been busted for illegal sexual interactions with minors on the BBS. Most cases have involved heterosexuals, but police can and do infiltrate computer systems—even though they are technically required to identify themselves as law enforcement officers when they log on. The hysteria about child pornography, in particular, has meant that FBI agents regularly browse through sex-related bulletin boards in order to search for incriminating evidence. In the process, of course, they are privy to everyone's sex talk.

In addition to being caught up in a changing area of law, users can open themselves up to harm from others online. There is something about typing away and "talking" to a faceless, nameless human that encourages people to open up about themselves in ways they would never do face-to-face. All this presumed anonymity, however, allows people to be taken advantage of. In fact, there is no such thing as total anonymity in the computer age.

When you establish a phone link with your computer and the telephone system, you open a door through which other hackers can enter your computer, perhaps without your knowing. It sounds Orwellian and—guess what?—it is. Even in a private chat during which no other users can reach you or read what you are talking about, the system operator or SYSOP can read all exchanges that occur online. Because of that, it's not a bad idea to get to know the people operating your service. Your SYSOP, after all, is the person who knows your real name and contact information—which is required for billing. He can be subpoenaed into court and forced not only to release users' identities, but also transcripts of online discussions.

If you have fears about blackmail, never disclose what you do for a living, what your exact address is, or any other information that might allow someone to track you down. If you plan to meet online contacts in person, always arrange your first meeting at a safe, public place. Quite simply, the rules—and etiquette—that apply to answering personal ads also apply to cruising the BBSs.

In addition, be extremely careful about using kinky BBSs at work. Often your entire session will be recorded in the computer server to which your PC is networked. On the Internet, files containing all sorts of information—whether it's e-mail, stories, or encoded pictures—are copied repeatedly at other computer sites as files make their way to you through the network. So while kinky online services offer new ways to explore your sexuality, they aren't risk-free.

Computer technology will never replace the real thing, but there is no question that many computer users prefer getting kinky text and pictures via computers rather than from traditional sources. Post a question on the BBS, and you are almost immediately inundated with information. Hungry for feedback about your ideas, for instant socialization, for a good argument, or for a virtual orgy? BBSs and the Internet can provide it. Whether you are a sophisticated user or a novice, cybersex is well worth the time and effort it takes to master the telecommunications technology of the 1990s.

On the BBS, in fact, fantasy is the ticket. So get into that kinky, head-to-toe-leather outfit that always makes your dick hard and your joints stiff, and crank up your modem. Better yet, put on your bunny slippers and robe. On the BBS, no one will ever know the difference. ■

CHRIS BUTLER INTERVIEW

By Jacques Happe

As a regular visitor to England, I think one might well argue that London has taken over Amsterdam's torch as the Sex Capital of Europe. England is a land not only of kniky men and sexy skinheads but of a strange political and legal environment. Many forms of sexual self-expression are restricted or have been criminalized. Nevertheless, many individuals have found ways to stand up for their own ideals. One of these is Chris Butler, the 45-year-old co-founder of SM Gays, one of the oldest and most influential groups in Europe's SM scene.

I first met Butler in April 1994 on a windy, cold night at London's Market Tavern. The event was a meeting of the Sadie Masie Club, one of the several SM-related groups that Butler has cre-

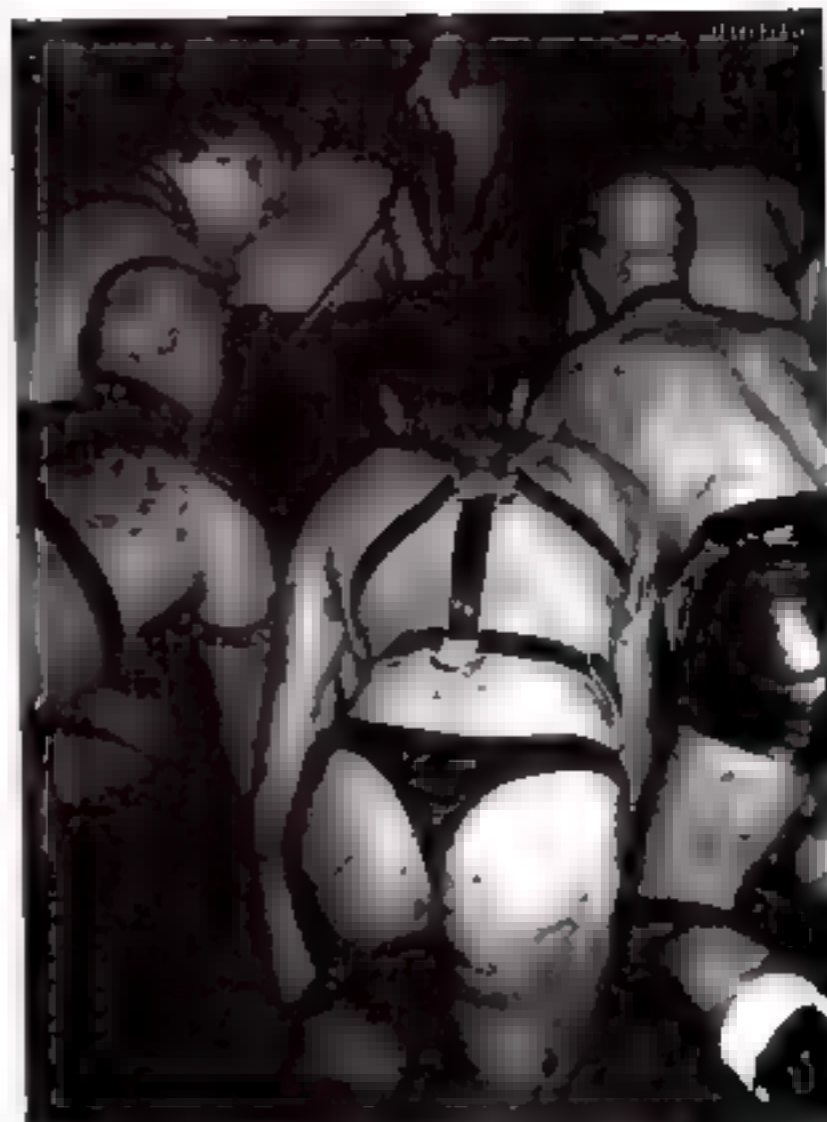

I had been in a relationship for two years. From the early age of 10, 11, 12, not only did we know we were gay, but we also [knew that] we liked rough, heavy, bondage sex as well. It was because of the very positive response from some 10 or 12 other men at that workshop that we decided we should form a group dedicated to gay men into SM."

Now, nearly 14 years later, Butler says that "it's still the policy [of SM Gays] that there is no sex going on at meetings. It is an educational group. It is also a meeting place, but it is essentially educational."

SM Gays "Discovery Nights" are an opportunity for you to explore SM activities, pick up new ideas, and learn good, safe SM techniques. (SM Gays Resource Book 3)

Discovery Nights are one of SM Gays' most popular offerings. Butler explains how the idea of Discovery Nights developed. "We originally started off with formal, theater-style lectures, sometimes with little presentations. We have now moved away from that, and offer demonstrations that are usually accompanied by written information that we provide to the audience. Each month we feature a different topic, such as SM for beginners, and we go through eight or 10 different techniques and put some safe ideas into the arena." Although not everyone who attends SM Gays' always-crowded Discovery Nights can get hands-on experience, Butler says, "We try to give everyone at least a brief experience of the range of activities."

Because SM Gays was founded at the beginning of the AIDS era, Butler explains that they were actually "some of the first people to talk about safer sex in relation to SM. Although most SM sex is very safe, there are some activities that require precautions. For instance, although it's highly illegal in the UK, if you're beating someone and you break the skin, then you've got blood involved. You need to know how to deal with that situation. Or if you're caning two people at the same time, or one right after the other [to the point of drawing blood], it's important to know how to protect both of them from the risk of infection. SM [players] need particular advice around the issue of safe sex."

"SM activity is an illegal assault if it results in marks or injuries that are more than transient and trifling." (SM Gays Resource Book 2, quoting from a 1992 legal opinion by the infamous Judge Rant)

The political situation in England concerns everyone who is involved in SM. Although many of those who attended British public schools grew accustomed to classroom canings, consensual SM has been in a kind of legal limbo—neither officially legal nor illegal. In 1992, however, a case involving "consensual assault" came before the English courts. In his opinion in that case, Judge Rant defined, for the first time, the nature of SM-inflicted injuries. In short, he wrote that any marks or bruises of more than a "trifling" or "transient" nature were to be taken as evidence of illegal physical assault. Since English law depends largely upon precedent, Judge Rant's opinion has the same effect as a piece of legislation.

SM Gays has been one of the groups most involved in attempts to change the political and legal situation for SM men and women in Britain. Says Butler, "The gay men's element in the Countdown on Spanner Campaign (CoS), in fact, came directly from SM Gays. The SM Gays [organization] didn't found [Countdown on Spanner], but some of our regular members [were involved in creating CoS]. SM Gays remains one of the main supporters of CoS, and I recently found out that Sadie Masie has been CoS's largest ited and continues to promote. In addition to the Sadie Masie Club and SM Gays—which Butler co-founded 13-1/2 years ago with his then-lover, Derek Cohen—Butler is the leading light behind Gummi (for rubber aficionados) and Tyger, Tyger (for lovers of piercings and tattoos).

According to Butler, SM Gays began as a very small group. "In North London there was a group that was holding a series of workshops on sexuality," he recalls. "One of them had been arranged on the subject of SM, and Derek had been asked to speak at that workshop. At the time, Derek and benefactor. Other SM organizations have come along [in their support] since the beginning, but the straight community isn't well organized. They've never had the stigma of being gay. They've never really been into political campaigning as a community. The background of the gay community meant that we understood from the beginning our need [to mount a campaign], but it's only since Spanner that the straight [SM] community has found a need to be political."

Isn't it the case, I ask, that many straight men and women into SM believe there's no need to go marching in the streets? That as long as you keep your mouth shut the police will leave you alone?

"Well," says Butler, "that's not true, as we found out. You've got to be out there. You've got to be vocal and you've got to be well-organized."

At this writing, England's Law Commission has produced a "consultation paper" entitled Consent and Offences Against the Person (Law Commission 134), which addressed a wide range of issues related to consent between adults in many different scenarios, including but not limited to SM. Among other matters, the Commission's paper addressed outlined possible changes in current English law related to SM, until June 30, 1994, comments were being solicited on the proposed reforms.

For many in the SM world, the Commission's proposals didn't go far enough, although they were at least a small step forward. Butler seems to agree. "What the Law Commission is proposing needs to be accepted, of course, even though it doesn't go very far. Things will go further, but I don't know how far into the future we'll have to go to get [the changes we need]. There are so many closet SMers in the political scene as we know from the death of a Member of Parliament recently [which is widely believed to have been SM-related]. It's only a matter of time before the stigma surrounding SM disappears and these people feel able to come out of the SM closet."

SM Gays, in other words, wants you to stand up as an SM player and be counted. At the same time, they want to make sure you understand the finer skills of the scene. Both intentions come together once a year in London's SM Pride March and Dungeon in the Sky celebration, with workshops, demonstrations, and much more. Chris Butler explains, "When the Spanner case went to the House of Lords a few years ago, Countdown on Spanner organized an SM Pride March a couple of days before. It was a high-profile march through the heart of London to show that there were a lot of people into SM who weren't afraid to come out and say so. Originally, Dungeon in the Sky and the SM Pride March were held on different days. Since 1993, the events were moved to the same day in order to create a greater impact. Now it has become a pansexual event, not just restricted to SM Gays and SM Dykes. There is a need for a march like this one. We've seen on the gay scene how the UK Pride March developed from a few hundred to the massive demonstration it was this year. We can see parallels with SM Pride. It will develop, as UK Pride has done, into an event in its own right."

"You can wear as much leather, rubber, uniforms, or fetish gear as you wish." (SM Gays Resource Book 1)

In the London club scene, more and more young men and women are showing up in leather, rubber, and other fetish wear. It's not only in the gay scene and it's not only in England. Such gear appears to have become a fashion item, and SM itself may follow suit.

"It goes back to when we started Sadie Masie," explains Butler. "We did start it as a space for gay men and dykes to meet in a social scene. If you went into one of the men's leather bars, which were not necessarily SM [spaces], you never, ever danced. It was out of the question. We just wanted to change that whole scene, and lighten it up, and bring dykes into the scene at the same events. And it became very, very popular in the UK. We had an awful lot of press coverage. Suddenly, it was the thing to do—dykes and gay men wearing rubber on the dance floor. Of course, you can hardly find a gay man now who doesn't own a leather jacket. So it totally changed the whole scene. It has developed in its own right. We primed it and we produced a product that a lot of the community, who were not necessarily into SM, wanted to nibble at."

One result, of course, has been that some in our community condemn the "vanillas" who want to wear the drag and play "leather tourist." Some argue that it's better to hide our scene again. Says Butler, "There are those who think it's too open now, spoiled and not heavy enough. But they don't have to come out at the scene—they can remain as hidden as they want in the privacy of their own homes. I don't see that as a problem, really—whether for people out in the scene or those who don't want to be out."

"Of course, we know from experience that it's not healthy for long-term enjoyment to hide things away. I think there are an awful lot of people who are exploring their sexuality but aren't talking about it openly. A lot of people are into some fun sexual scenes, but don't want to talk about it. The classic thing is that a lot of men are into spanking and caning because they went to public schools and were used to a system in which corporal punishment was a part of everyday life. But no, we should not hide it. If you hide an activity, people think you are frightened, and that makes you vulnerable." ■

COCK SUCKING

By Dr. Tony Scarsella

For most gay men, cocksucking is their first homosexual experience, other than engaging in some mutual masturbation with a buddy after school or participating in a circle jerk around the campfire at summer camp.

Many years and many men later, cocksucking remains a favorite sexual practice for most gay men. Even men who evolve into serious leather and fetish scenes generally never outgrow their love of oral sex. Cocksucking feels so good for sucker and suckee alike, and it can be an exciting part of many scenes.

Cocksucking may be indispensable for your sex life. Unfortunately, recent medical research indicates that cocksucking can also be dangerous for your health, even if you don't bring your buddy to orgasm and take his come in your mouth.

I know that you don't want to hear this news. But you, the sexual adventurer and Dominion reader, need to know the latest facts. With this information, you can weigh the risks—as well as the rewards—of cocksucking without orgasm, and then determine what you will do in the future.

Since the advent of the AIDS crisis, gay men have debated the risks of cocksucking without orgasm as they have anxiously studied lists of unsafe, possibly unsafe, and safe sex practices. "Receptive anal sex without a condom"—that's always been considered unsafe. "Receptive oral sex without orgasm"—(in other words, you suck your buddy's cock, but he doesn't come in your mouth)—now, that's always been ambiguous.

For over a decade, some gay men and physicians have insisted that the pre-seminal fluid (precum) of HIV-positive men doesn't carry the virus. So, don't worry. Go down on all the dick you want.

Others have said that precum can carry the HIV virus, but only infinitesimal amounts, not enough to really worry about. In that event, you also need to worry about how much precum a man's cock gives off. Some men hardly have any precum. Others virtually ooze this clear, slightly alkaline, viscous fluid when they get aroused.

Still other gay men and physicians have maintained that precum can carry considerable amounts of the HIV virus. Therefore, sucking an HIV-positive buddy's cock, even if he doesn't reach orgasm, is unsafe because of the precum, unless he wears a condom. That's no fun, most guys say, unless you're really into rubber and latex.

To make the debate about the risks of cocksucking all the more confusing, some gay men and physicians have insisted that the saliva in the mouth killed the HIV virus, or somehow made it less infectious. If you accepted that theory, cocksucking was probably safe as long as your mouth didn't have any sores or cuts which might allow the virus to enter your bloodstream.

To reduce the risk of infection, many gay men gave up flossing a day or two before a hot date. Others greedily sucked cock and then rinsed out their mouths with an alcohol-based mouthwash or 80-proof alcohol (say, vodka or gin) in hopes of killing any possible HIV viruses.

Despite all this hopeful talk over the past decade, anecdotal evidence has indicated that cocksucking carried the risk of HIV transmission, even without orgasm. Almost every physician who specializes in HIV disease has treated some patients who have steadfastly insisted that they never engaged in unsafe sex, that their only sexual outlet was cocksucking without orgasm.

Anecdotal evidence is one thing, and it is subject to possible doubt. Controlled scientific studies are another, and they can usually be trusted to provide accurate information.

Now, several recent studies have proven a small but definite risk of HIV transmission through cocksucking without orgasm. Every man's gives off some precum when aroused, even if you can't easily see the liquid, and an HIV-positive man's precum often contains significant amounts of the virus. The amount is generally highest for men who have recently become HIV-positive and those who have full-blown AIDS.

Furthermore, the HIV virus can be transmitted through the mucous membranes of the mouth. Saliva does not kill the virus quickly. A man may not have any noticeable cuts or sores in their mouth. But he probably has cuts or abrasions which are too small for him to notice but which are large enough for the virus to enter his bloodstream. Using an alcohol-based mouthwash or gargling with vodka doesn't reduce the risk of infection, because the virus crosses the blood barrier almost instantly.

What's the risk of cocksucking without orgasm? According to studies about HIV in precum, it's less than the risk of very unsafe activities like receptive anal sex without a condom. But definite figures are hard to come by. One researcher believes that the risk of HIV transmission is 6% per partner for unprotected anal sex and 1% per partner for cocksucking without orgasm. Other physicians believe that the figure is one half of 1%.

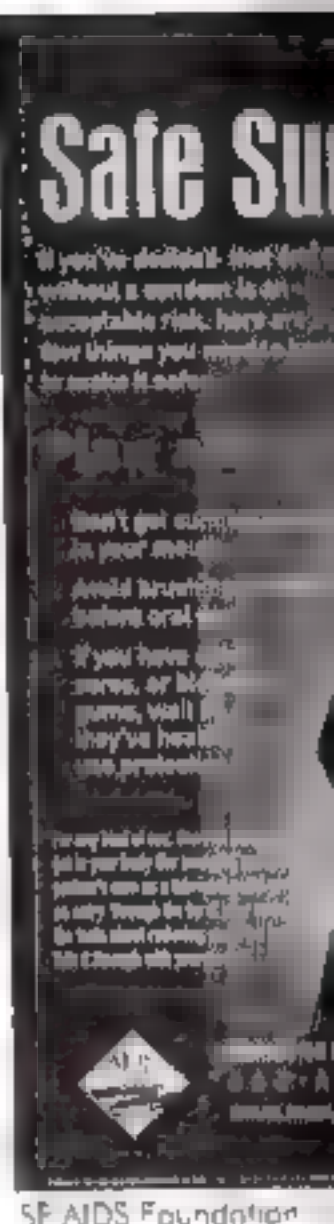

At present, we just don't have any really good estimates of the risk. In coming years, additional studies should clarify the numbers. But a small danger of HIV transmission via cocksucking without orgasm has been demonstrated but not quantified.

Now, it's your choice what you'll do with this information. If you are going to suck cock, even without orgasm, at least take some of the familiar precautions to reduce the chance of transmission, such as avoiding the practice if you have cuts or sores in your mouth.

To be really safe, you should skip cocksucking altogether, unless your buddy wears a condom. If you take this route, avoid the pre-lubricated condoms. They taste terrible.

If you aren't excited about the thought of having a slippery latex condom in your mouth, even an unlubricated one, what about sucking the guy's balls or just the shaft of his penis, carefully avoiding the head? As any good cocksucker knows, a pleasurable blowjob involves plenty of tongue action on the underside of the shaft and on the balls, as well as the head.

But this "lick-it-but-don't-put-the-head-in-your-mouth" approach will create terrible temptations for most gay men and a probable lapse into actual cocksucking unless you have extraordinary willpower. And most gay men don't have that kind of willpower when it comes to a hot guy's hard cock, particularly if they have been drinking or taking drugs.

So, what can you do? Fortunately, the alternative to cocksucking doesn't have to be a return to adolescent mutual masturbation or circle jerks. Call upon some of the creativity and daring that you devote to leather and fetish sex. Find new but safe games that allow you to enjoy cocks but don't involve the swallowing of pre-cum and other bodily fluids.

Turn ordinary mutual masturbation into some grown-up games involving not only dirty talk but also your leather or rubber gear and SM play. Explore the wide range of cock and ball torment games, the well-known "CBT" abbreviation in the personal ads. In a domination and submission scene, a top can tease his bottom with his hard dick, but never lets his buddy suck it. That can make for a hot scene and, more important, a safe one.

For years, gay men have fixated on other men's dicks and, particularly, on cocksucking. Unfortunately, times have changed. Now, we know that cocksucking, even without orgasm, carries some definite risks to your health. How you handle these risks must be your own choice. But I'd still like to offer some advice: Avoid cocksucking and explore other approaches to sexual pleasure and adventure. ■

SAFE SEX SUCKS

By Wendell Ricketts

Although few AIDS educators will admit it, the safe-sex information with which they have been inundating the gay, lesbian, and bisexual community over the last decade has carried with it a fatal flaw. Even as doctors, researchers, health educators, and activists have argued over what sexual practices do and don't belong on the "safe" list, that is, virtually no one has been willing to talk to sexually active men and women about how to weigh conflicting medical information, evaluate the biases of their information sources; and learn to make sane, reasonable assessments of the personally acceptable risks to which their sexual practices may expose them. Instead, we've settled for a scattershot approach and for slogans like this one: Anyone can get AIDS.

Well, yes, anyone can. But not everyone is equally likely to.

Recent months have brought a deluge of new and confusing safe-sex information—this time related to a reassessment of the dangers of cocksucking. As with every debate about safer-sex rules that has come before, people who need to know how to protect themselves from AIDS are getting more of what won't help (a torrent of personal conjecture and "expert" arguments over interpretation) and less of what will (guidance in evaluating the available information and in using it to establish a personal hierarchy of risk).

Part of the problem has always been that even scientific research doesn't automatically lead to clarity about safer sex. In one widely reported study, for example,¹ two men apparently seroconverted after they engaged in cocksucking in which they sometimes did and sometimes didn't take semen into their mouths. Making this study somewhat difficult to interpret, however, is the fact that both men had gingivitis. In other words, they may have taken infected semen into their mouths at a point when their gums were bleeding. Their gum condition, then, provided a more efficient "portal" for HIV and increased the risk—in their specific case—of sucking cock. Yet the study has been used to argue, in rather vague ways, that oral sex presents a greater risk than experts had previously realized.

Unfortunately, there's no new news here. No one has ever claimed that cocksucking to orgasm was without risk, and no new information has been discovered recently that throws doubt on our understanding of the degree of that risk.

When it comes to cocksucking without orgasm, meanwhile, two small-scale reports have indicated that HIV viral material (though not necessarily infectious HIV) is present in the pre-cum of 43%² to 52%³ of HIV-antibody-positive men. So far there has only been one study—not several as Dr. Scarsella reports—that suggests actual HIV transmission following unprotected cocksucking without orgasm. In that study, Dr. Michael Samuel, an epidemiologist at the New Mexico Department of Health, looked at pooled data collected between 1984 and 1989 from three San Francisco "cohorts."⁴

In reviewing this research, Dr. Scarsella quotes Samuel as saying that there is a one-percent risk per partner of contracting HIV via cocksucking without orgasm. In fact, Samuel reports no separate figure for cocksucking without orgasm. In a phone interview with Drummer, Samuel confirmed that his study was not designed to tease out a separate risk for cocksucking with vs. without orgasm and that it provided no proof of actual transmission of HIV via pre-cum.

Samuel's one-percent risk rate for "receptive" cocksucking, then, is based on a statistical model of prevalence of HIV infection in a given population (in this case, gay men in San Francisco). It cannot accurately account for the dozens of other variables that affect whether HIV may be transmitted between two people engaged in a specific act of cocksucking. Because of the way data were collected, moreover, Samuel could report only per-partner risk estimates, although he and his co-authors acknowledge that, "for personal decision making and for modeling, the per-contact infectivity is of greater relevance than the per-partner infectivity."⁵ That only makes logical sense.

If you are antibody-negative and your partners are antibody-negative, for instance, the risks of being infected with HIV through unprotected cocksucking—even to the point of taking cum into your mouth—are low.

The risk decreases further if you have only one partner and if he, in turn, isn't having sex with anybody besides you (or sharing IV drug needles or receiving blood transfusions).

If you base your behavior on such a belief, however, you obviously make some major assumptions—including the assumption that HIV is the sole cause of AIDS, that HIV-antibody tests are always reliable (they're not), and that your presumably antibody-negative partners are not simply in the midst of a "latency" period (the months after infection before antibodies to the virus show up on tests). Maybe you can live with the degree of doubt inherent in such assumptions and maybe you can't.

WEIGHING THE RISKS

Perhaps even more valuable than understanding the medical information is recognizing the fact that we live in a world that is full of risks—even deadly ones. People who drive to work in rush-hour traffic take a significant risk of being killed in a car accident. (Motor-vehicle fatalities accounted for one in every 50 deaths in 1990.) Cigarette smokers expose themselves to a wide range of debilitating and fatal diseases. (Seven percent of all deaths annually are caused by lung cancer.) Californians live with the threat of devastating earthquakes, midwesterners risk disastrous tornadoes and floods, citizens on the Mexico-Texas border are in increasing danger of encountering swarms of "killer" bees. We weigh and assess such risks as these—and countless others—as we go about our daily lives. And we accept them.

More than that, we understand that risk can be managed, moderated, and lived with. There is logic in the assertion that even the tiny risk of being killed in a plane crash (approximately one death per 50,000 passengers) increases if you fly twice weekly instead of only once a year—although we accept the fact that any flight involves some danger.

When it comes to AIDS, however, many people in the United States (including not a few medical professionals) behave as though "zero-risk" can be achieved or even expected. We've all heard the news interviews with terrified parents who refuse to let some kid with AIDS into their child's grade school because "even if there's only a one-in-a-billion chance that my son could catch AIDS from him, that's too much." If such parents really believed in protecting their children from anything that posed more than a "one in a billion" risk, they'd never even let them get on the school bus in the morning.

None of this is meant to trivialize the risk of contracting HIV or to encourage anyone to take that risk lightly. But it is essential to view our AIDS risk in the context of the innumerable, non-quantifiable risks that are inherent simply in being alive—and to use that perspective to make rational, information-based decisions about our behavior.

For those who insist on zero AIDS risk, of course, no margin of error is small enough. In the sexual arena, that effectively means no sex, because absolutely safe sex requires avoiding all contact between potentially infectious body fluids and mucous membranes (such as the inside of the mouth or the lining of the rectum) and even the skin. No cum on my chest, I might have scratched the head off a pimple there. No kissing, because HIV has been found in saliva.

It may also mean giving up our faith in the "safety" of condoms. Although we've put a lot of eggs into that particular basket, research confirms that condom effectiveness varies significantly from brand to brand. One recent study, in fact, reported that several popular condom brands, when subjected to simulated intercourse in the laboratory, leaked HIV between 0.9% and 22.8% of the time.⁶ Condoms, in other words, pose a risk of HIV transmission even when they are used correctly. Yet AIDS educators continue to act as if condoms were the Great White Hope of the safe-sex movement.

For those who realize that zero-risk sex and zero-risk living don't exist, there's only one completely accurate—if not completely reassuring—answer to the question Is it dangerous to suck cock? And that is, It depends. It depends upon whether the person whose cock you are sucking is HIV-antibody-positive or not. It depends upon how much your gums bleed when you brush your teeth. It depends upon what you make of the limited research that shows the presence of HIV viral material in pre-cum. It depends upon whether your partner even produces pre-cum. (Alfred Kinsey reported that one-third of the men in his research produced no pre-cum at all, regardless of their age or level of arousal.) It depends upon whether you get cum in your mouth or not. And on and on.

Further, despite what you may have read in your local paper, legitimate scientific debates are still taking place over such matters as when and under what conditions semen or pre-cum contain infectious HIV; whether saliva kills or inhibits HIV; whether the likelihood of transmission of HIV through mouth-penis contact depends upon the virulence of the strain of HIV, upon the amount of HIV transmitted, upon the number of contacts, upon the condition of the mucus membrane lining the urethra, or upon some combination of these; and about the way in which transmission is affected by such common dental problems as gingivitis or by the presence of sores or cuts (either visible wounds or microabrasions) in the mouth of the person who sucks cock. How much risk does each of these factors add? That sort of information is simply never going to be quantifiable.

SAFE BUT SORRY?

At a symposium on AIDS in the Media held at the Wexner Center at Columbus, Ohio in 1993, one panel member put safer-sex concerns into this context: "Avoiding HIV is not a sufficient purpose for my life," he said.

Although we have some information about the changes people have made in their sexual practices in the face of AIDS, we know almost nothing about how individuals come to those decisions. It's conceivable, for example, that some men have elected to stop getting butt-fucked, but have decided that their sex lives would suffer too greatly if they also had to give up cocksucking. So the pact they make with themselves is "I'll suck cock if I want to, but I won't get cum in my mouth. And no more cocks up my ass." In his Drummer interview, for example, Samuel noted that men were most likely to allow a partner to come in their mouths if he was HIV-antibody negative. These men, in other words, understood the danger of ingesting HIV-infected semen and took correct steps to avoid contact with it.

Such men need to be congratulated for having successfully negotiated the minefield of safe-sex information and for having come to decisions they can live with. What usually happens instead, however, is that they are made to feel guilty for not having engaged in "completely" safe sex.

Safer-sex campaigns, in fact, particularly those directed toward younger people, trade in such slogans as "No orgasm is worth risking your life for." But the premise behind these efforts is false. First, we could just as accurately say "No trip down the street for a Big Mac is worth risking your life for," but that would sound as ludicrous as it is. (Even though you could get run down in the crosswalk on your way there, be shot by a disgruntled postal worker while you're eating, or choke to death on a piece of gristle.)

Far more insidious, however, is the judgment inherent in such slogans, that sex is a shameful and trivial pursuit and that anyone who amplifies and acknowledges the importance of sex in his or her life is pathetic and deluded. What safer-sex advocates have largely forgotten is that sex serves an important, even indispensable function in our lives. It brings with it affection, approval, recreation, physical relaxation, joy, and lots of other good things that are part of what we might call the life force.

For gay men, moreover, the symbolic significance of semen can hardly be overestimated. Not being able to take another man's cum into our bodies is not a trivial loss; and not being able to give our cum to someone else (or to "force" him to take it) wreaks havoc with what can be one of the hottest, most intimate interactions available through sex. For men into SM, in addition, the power dynamic involved in fucking someone's mouth (or in worshipping your Daddy's dick) is not negligible. If we're going to take activities of such significance away from people, we have to replace them with something. But that is a task that safer-sex advocates have almost entirely abdicated. Rather, the best counsel they have to offer is that we "avoid" this or that activity or that we learn to "eroticize" condoms.

There's no question that making personal decisions about AIDS and sex takes us into territory that most of us find difficult to navigate. Safer-sex decisions always involve the weighing of risks against benefits, the balancing of threats to both physical and emotional health, and at least occasional forays into so-called "gray areas." The degree to which safer-sex advice fails to address these issues is the degree to which the people who need it most are being left to fend for themselves. ■

Story by James Medley
Illustration by The Hun

Luke Summers is the most brazen and cock-hungry guy I know. He's farmboy pretty and that's the only way I can describe him.

You can almost visualize a stalk of oats hanging out of his pretty lips. I use that word advisedly. His lips are pretty, moist and full. He has a cowlick right in front of his short blond hair and his eyes are a robin's-eye blue. He's 19 and butch as hell even if he is pretty.

Luke will do absolutely anything to get his rocks off a many times as possible. The boy is insatiable. The dirtier the sex, the better he likes it—hot, sweaty man-sex. I've never heard Luke call anything kinky. He's into getting it on with straight guys, gay guys, butches, fems, doesn't matter, anything so long as it's male. Uniforms turn him on. One day he's an exhibitionist, the next a voyeur. He loves to be pissed on, drunk a little SM, the usual. Any kind of fantasy gets his juices flowing. And he certainly knows how to pleasure a man—being one himself.

The little fucker's got a whit inches like some smaller men do, heavy cocks making up for their short stature, and one of the prettiest little butts you've ever seen. He has one of those asses which are high-hung, fairly jumping off his spine in twin mounds of ass flesh with a deep ditch, making his little nichons just ripe for fucking.

He told me that when I wasn't around serving as his cum catcher, he would sit on this low wall outside of the park here in the small Tennessee community we both live in, with his big cock and balls hanging out of a hole he had ripped open in the crotch of his Levi's. He'd cruise the cars passing by and if a single man was in it alone, Luke would move his hand to the side so the dude could see his genitals. He got beaten up a couple of times for exposing himself that way, but that didn't slow him down at all.

"If they're looking down there anyway, they must be looking for something," he'd said.

Then, if the guy circled the block a couple of times, Luke would get hard and keep his huge rod between his legs but let the guy see it when he passed. I've watched him do this a couple of times when he didn't know I was looking. What Luke didn't realize was, his balls are so big that anybody could have seen them hanging in their cream bag from between his thighs as they approached. His nuts look like furry tomatoes.

Luke has a mania for public toilets. I think the chance of getting caught turns him on as well. Anything dangerous or risky is right up Luke's alley, his butt-alley usually.

I often think of Luke as my gay son. My name is Ben Saxon and I'm on the road a lot, having the eastern half of Tennessee as my territory. I had found a cruisy public bathroom last week and taken Luke there as I often do, knowing his mania for them. He'd sucked off two white truckers through the glory holes and a big black driver who was staying in the motel out back. I had lost count after that. The black man had said he had to make a drop off and gas up but to meet him in number three in two hours.

"You're obsessed, Luke," I said. "How could you possibly get off again?"

"Cause I'm young, hung and full of cum," he said, one of his favorite expressions.

"You've got too much sap in you, you little bugger." That was my nickname for him and I used it affectionately. "The guy said two hours and it isn't even dark yet. We can't hang around here until then."

"I want you to taste that black man's meat, Ben. It was good."

"How can you remember what one guy's dick tastes like? Jeez, Luke, you did three or four."

"Because it was spicy, tasted like cinnamon or nutmeg, Christmas-flavored."

"C'mon then, let's go," I said. "We'll kill the time in the cafe."

The rooms the truck stop rented in back of the restaurant and service station reminded me of cheap motels built in the '40s. Two lengthy concrete buildings were joined to form an L-shaped structure which stood detached from the main building. We located number three and Luke rapped lightly on the red-painted door.

"Come in," we heard the black driver say from inside the room.

Luke pushed through the door and I followed. The room was a tiny cubicle, with barely enough room to change your mind in. Since the drivers used them principally as a place to nap, this one was minimally furnished with a double bed and one small night stand. The black guy was lying on the bed.

Clad only in a jockstrap, he was leafing through a skin mag, a pile of several beside him. He was only half tumescent but his cock bulged in the pouch like a folded lump of sausage. He palmed his warm brown hand over his crotch and smiled at us.

"I've been waiting for you, pretty boy," he said to Luke. To me, "My name's Dane, what's yours?"

I told him "Ben," and he said matter-of-factly, "Get naked, let's have some fun." Luke and I started stripping under Dane's hungry gaze and his cock lengthened as we did. "Leave your underwear on," Dane said when we were down to them. "So this is your son, huh?"

I went blank for only a moment. It was as if this handsome hunk had read my mind about the way I feel for Luke. "Yeah,"

"C'mon son, get over my lap. Daddy's going to have to spank you."

I said gruffly, "this is Luke. He's my little boy."

"Did you teach him how to suck cock?" Dane slurred lasciviously.

Yeah," I said in a low, dirty way.

Well, you didn't teach him very good," Dane said. "He damn near bit my cock off back in the toilets."

I looked sternly at Luke. "Is that so, son? You didn't suck the man's cock like I taught you to?"

Luke put a hang-dog expression on his face and said sheepishly, "It was too big, Daddy. I couldn't hardly get my mouth around it. I did the best I could."

From the bed, Dane growled, "I think you oughta beat his little butt for that. Teach him how to suck a man's dick like he should."

Yeah, I think I'm gonna have to do that," I said, glowering menacingly at Luke. "C'mon son, get over my lap. Daddy's going to have to spank you."

"No, Daddy," Luke said in an adolescent voice. "Please, don't spank me, I'll try harder."

I sat on the edge of the bed next to Dane. "Get over here, son. I have to punish you. Then I'll have to teach you how to suck cock all over again. Come here."

Luke walked warily to the side of the bed and I grabbed him and threw him forcefully across my thighs. His cock was already hard and dug into my groin. My boner rared to attention. I pushed his ass down harder onto it and my cock head slid out of the waistband of my jockeys.

Hold his head, man," I said to Dane. "While I beat his little ass."

Luke wriggled and squirmed like a puppy in my lap. Dane sat beside me and pulled Luke's head onto his crotch. Dane's cock was sticking out of the wide elastic band a good four inches, about halfway. His purple fucker was drooling lube all over his furry belly.

"Eat his dick while I spank your butt," I commanded. I gave his ass a sharp slap.

"No, Daddy, no!" Luke yelped like a stepped-on dog. "Don't make me.

Don't make me suck his cock anymore!"

"Eat that fucking dick, you little cocksucker!" Dane angrily snarled. He forcibly shoved Luke's mouth over his jutting cock head. I beat Luke's ass harder and harder. His cock got harder and harder too.

Dane held Luke's pretty lips around his straining erection and forced it down his throat till Luke's neck bulged out with heavy black cock.

Thwap! Thwap! Thwap! I pummeled his quivering ass flesh harder and faster till his globes shook like twin mounds of Jell-O. Luke hunched and pumped his buttocks, grinding his dick into my groin, and he noisily slobbered all over Dane's cock like he was resisting eating it.

"It hurts him more if his little underpants are wet," I growled. "Piss on him, Dane."

Dane dragged Luke's mouth off his prick by the hair and stood up. He pulled his jockstrap down to just below his bull balls and had to hold his hard-on tight and push it down so the flaring purple head was aimed at Luke's punished buttocks.

"Please don't, mister, don't piss on me!" Luke wailed.

Dane punched out his hips and put the head of his cock right into Luke's ass ditch. He pressed the tight white fabric of Luke's underwear up his chute.

"Hold 'im tight man, here it comes," Dane panted. He cut loose with a jet stream of piss, filling Luke's ass-trench with his gushing yellow urine. The warm liquid ran through Luke's clenchiing butt globes and soaked onto my groin. Then Dane directed his hosing spray onto my chest and it ran in streaming rivulets till my crotch was drenched in warm, wet piss.

Dane kept on spraying. He squirted his pee up and down Luke's writhing torso, onto his face and lashing into his mouth. Luke held his mouth wide open, drinking every drop.

Shlap! Shlap! Shlap! I pounded his watery ass. Piss splashed all over us, flying back onto Dane's groin.

"Now, you little cocksucker," I snarled, "eat that good black cock like you're supposed to. Show that big man how you can suck a real man's meat. Suck 'im!"

Dane swung his club like a ball bat, slapping Luke's face with the dreadfully bloated organ. More wet piss flew around us. Dane's big, black cock had Luke's cheeks turning an angry crimson as he flailed his face with the swinging meat. He batted a home run on Luke's flaming lips.

"Now eat it, cocksucker!" Dane ordered. "Suck my thick black cock before I fuck you with it!"

Luke slurped Dane's meat into his mouth and his red cheeks bulged with the effort. The friction from his hunching loins was about to bring me off in my underwear.

"I'll hold 'im down and you fuck it in 'im," I grunted. I pulled Luke's head off Dane's meat and threw him face-down on the bed. I got his head wedged between my folded legs and Dane straddled his ass. I pulled the elastic band of my underwear below my balls and it pushed my cock and nuts up tight to my belly.

I leaned over Luke's thrashing body to taste Dane's heavy black fucker. Dane pulled his cock and balls out of the jockstrap, the elastic pushing the whole dark mass of his genitals into his stomach. It was just as Luke had said, tasting spicy and funky, salty from his piss, a delectable man-smell. I sucked him till he was juicy and shined up with spit.

"Now fuck my son," I said, drawing off and leaning back.

"No, Daddy! Please don't, Daddy!" Luke cried. "Don't let him fuck me. Don't let him fuck your little boy!"

"Eat my cock, son, while he fucks you," I said, dragging the front of my jockeys down further. I gripped my meat and ran it all over Luke's face till his features were slimy and gummed up. "Look what you do to me, son, see how hard you make Daddy's cock. Feel that fucker."

"No, Daddy, that's not right. I'm your son. I'm not supposed to play with your privates."

"I can't help it. Spanking my little boy drives me wild. C'mon, make Daddy feel good, touch it."

"No, Daddy," Luke said, shaking his head. "It ain't right. I ain't supposed to suck on my daddy's cock. Don't make me!"

"You're gonna suck that fucking dick like I taught you, you little bastard. Now get on it!"

Dane held his turgid shaft at the base and squeezed it up so that his knob swelled even more. He started pushing it against Luke's rump, teasing him with it.

"No, Daddy! He can't fuck me, I'm a boy," Luke wailed.

"I know you're a boy. And you've got a tight little boy-ass. I'm gonna make you a fuck-boy." I shoved his mouth down onto my dick and he started sucking me off.

Dane yanked Luke's underwear to one side with such force that he ripped open one leg and exposed Luke's buttocks.

"You've got to eat his asshole first," I said, kneading and massaging the tight muscles in Luke's back. "Get 'im ready for it. He's too tight if you don't."

Dane hunkered down and palmed Luke's ass cheeks apart. He slurped noisily up and down Luke's dimpled and clenching butt crack. His dark purple lips looked hot and sensual against Luke's rosy pucker as he speared inside him.

"Now fuck him good," I said. "Squash that fat fucker up his little ass."

Dane's flat belly was heaving and his pecs worked with jumping muscles as he slid his root up Luke's bung hole. Dane gritted his teeth and slitted up his eyes as he worked his meat inside Luke's ass ring. Luke groaned and moaned around my embedded cock and hunched his cute little rump into the mattress. His ass dimpled and his flanks quivered as Dane drove his fuck home. I held his head tightly between my legs.

"Ah, Jesus, man!" Dane gasped. "Sweet fucking ass, man. Such a sweet little boy you've got."

"Yeah! Don't he feel good inside? My sweet little boy. He knows how to take a man's fuck. Work it in 'im deep, jab his trigger till he cums!"

Dane went into the rolling undulations of a hot boy-fuck, his muscles rippling all over his sinewy tight body. Luke was loving it and he fed more hungrily on my tool, shafting my prick through the slipstream of his juicy lips till I was nearly ready to cream.

Dane reached behind himself and dragged off his jockstrap, which had been hanging around his ankles. He pulled Luke's mouth off my meat and put the jockstrap over Luke's face. The pouch covered Luke's mouth and nose, and the leg straps hung on either side of his face like the reins for a horse.

"He'd sucked off two white truckers through the glory holes and a big black driver who was staying in the motel out back. I had lost count after that."

“Luke creamed off all over the sheets. Dane bucked and humped his juice into the deepest pit of Luke’s bowels. I felt my own spewing seed gushing into Dane.”

“Get over here and fuck me, man,” Dane commanded me. “Suck it up me hard while I fuck your son.”

I crawled behind Dane and shoved my cock right into his gooey asshole. He was as hot as fire inside. I pushed my cock all the way into his yielding ass flesh, and he moaned and sighed deeply. I sheathed my root all the way to the balls and pumped my cock in a quick fucking rhythm.

Dane rode Luke like a stallion, pulling backward on the reins of the strap, the wet pouch across his face, dragging Luke’s head back and arching his spine till Dane’s grinding groin was pushed out further than his body. It was like Luke was getting a double fuck.

“Fuck that boy, man! Fuck that sweet little ass!” I panted. “Tell ‘im you like it, son. Tell ‘im you like cock up your butt.”

“No, Daddy, no. It hurts!” His voice was muffled from the pouch.

“C’mon, baby, feel that dick in you. Tell me it feels good. Tell Daddy you love it.”

“Ah Daddy! Oh Daddy!”

“That’s my boy, that’s it. Get on it. Take his fuck, take it boy. Deep-dick him, man!”

Suddenly, Luke splayed his legs as wide apart as they would go and frantically yelled, “Daddy! Daddy, he’s gonna cum in me. He’s gonna shoot off inside of me!”

“Good baby! Good! Milk ‘im off like I taught you. Work that little ass of yours. Show him how Daddy’s little boy makes a man’s milk shoot.”

I pumped harder into Dane, jabbing at his spark plug and grinding my pubic bone against his coccyx.

“He’s making me cum, Daddy! I’m gonna shoot!”

“Cum, baby! C’mon, Daddy’s ready too.”

“Ah Daddy! Oh Daddy! I’m cumming!”

“Yeah! Yeah! Yeah!” Dane gasped.

I moaned and panted, “Here it comes! Take my load! Shoot off, Luke! Blow your nuts!”

Dane reached beneath Luke and pulled him into a doggie crouch. Then he whacked him off.

Luke creamed off all over the sheets. Dane bucked and humped his juice into the deepest pit of Luke’s bowels. I felt my own spewing seed gushing into Dane. I grabbed Dane around the waist and hung on for dear life as a shattering ejaculation hit me like a baseball thrown between my legs. I shuddered throughout my body as my jolting orgasm barreled out of my flushing nuts in hot waves and bursts. I ground my spurning knob against Dane’s butt-button and felt him hosing his seed up inside of Luke.

We all three panted and gasped, moaned and groaned, grunted and strained against one another’s heaving flesh till our juices were expended and we were drained. Sweat ran from our joined bodies, and we collapsed in an exhausted pile on the trembling bed.

“Well, that was fun. Now whaddaya wanna do?” Luke asked like a naughty boy.

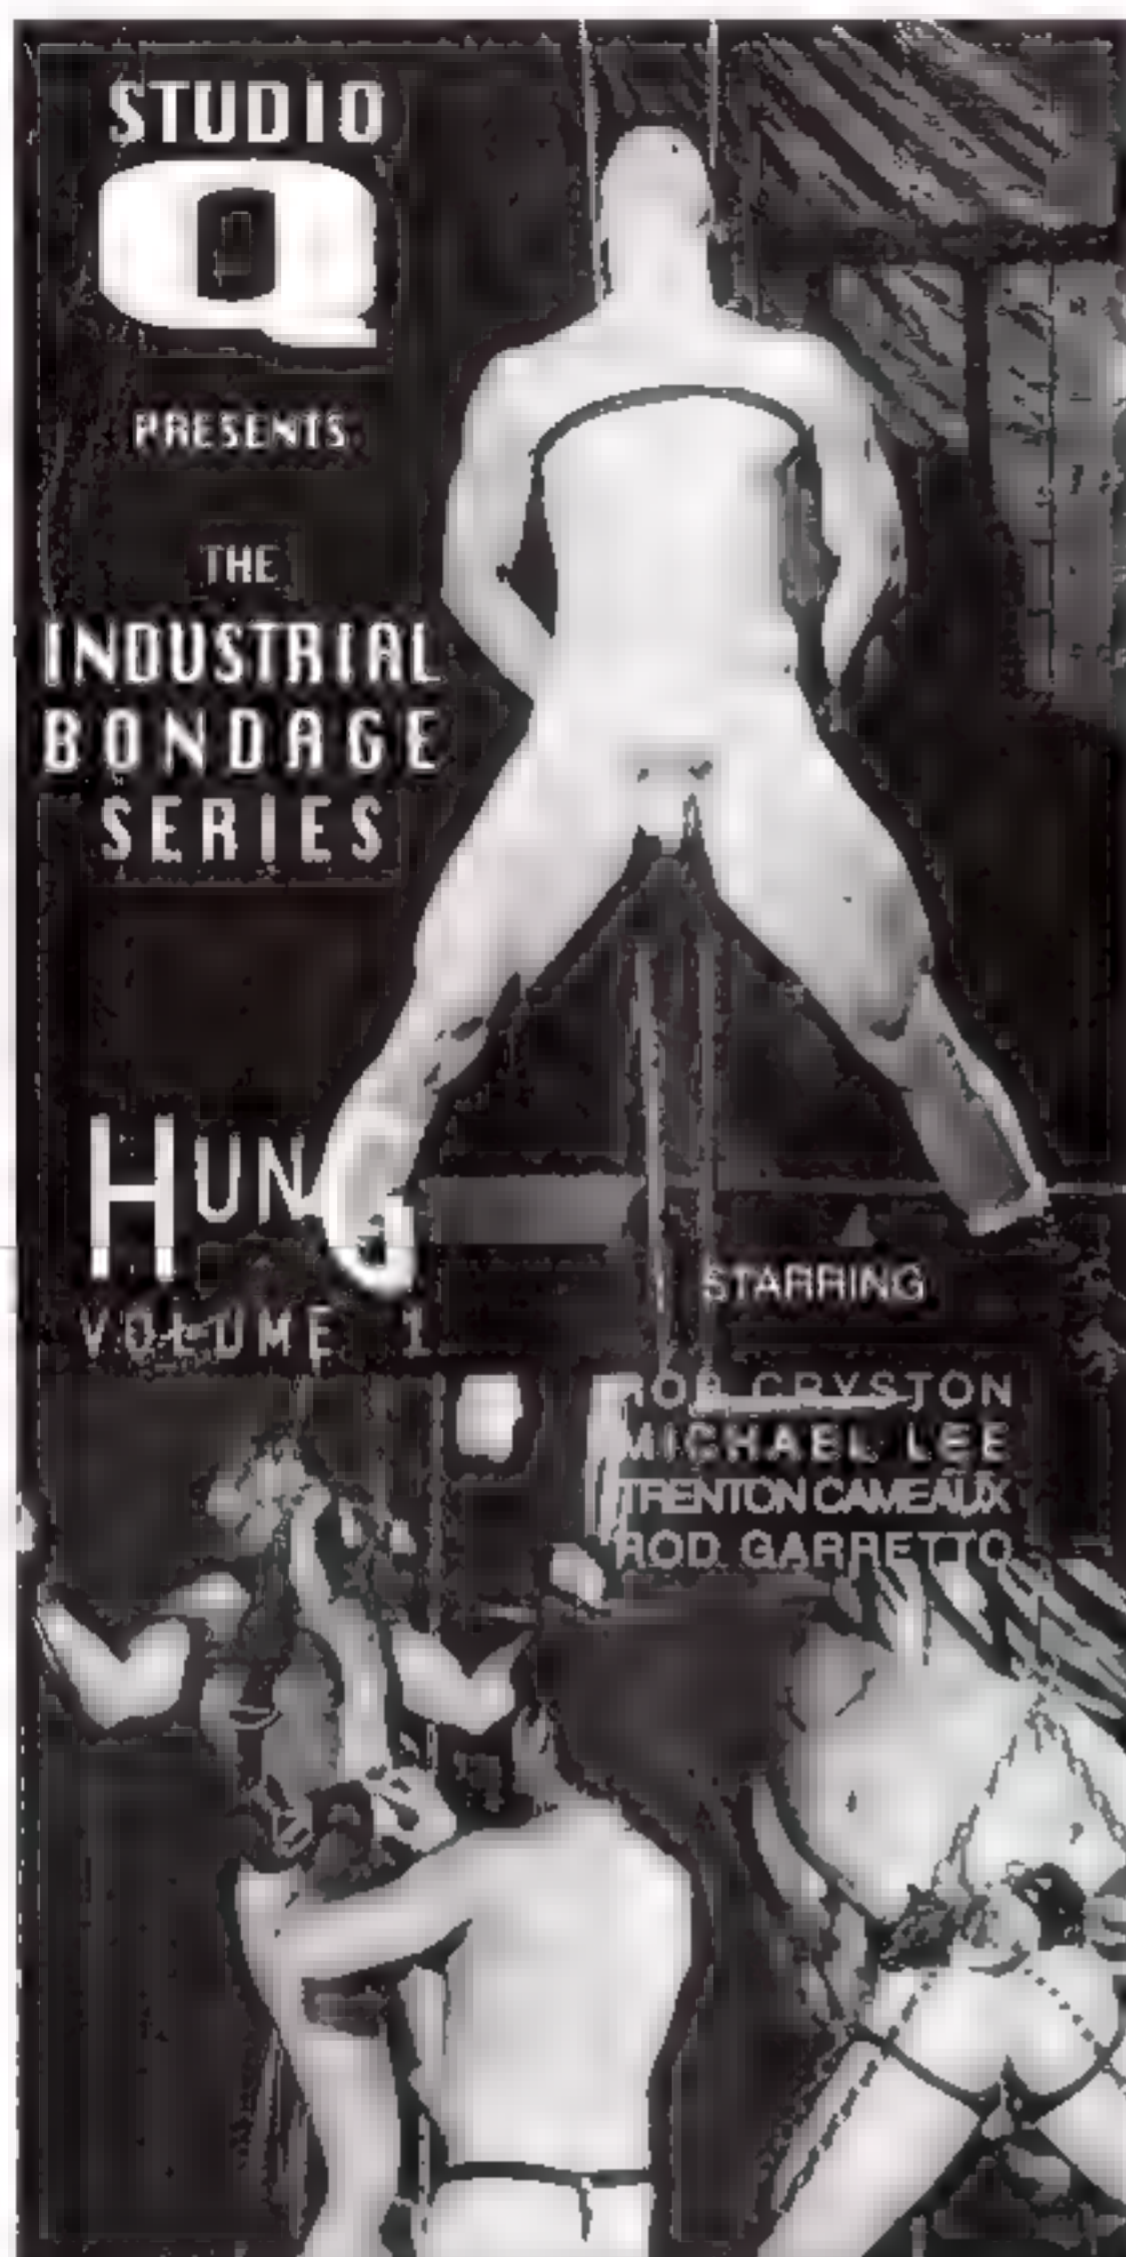

“We’ve gotta get the hell outta here,” I responded.

“Y’all can spend the night if you want,” Dane said, pulling his dripping black hose out of Luke’s well-fucked asshole. Luke turned over on his back and his dick spat out another little dab of cream. The boy was a cum factory.

There was cum all over the sheets where Luke had spit his boy-juice out. They were wringing wet from all the piss. “You’re going to have to sleep in that by yourself,” I said to Dane, pointing to it.

“It’s your loss,” Dane said. “I’ll probably add a little to it later.”

“Wish we could stick around for that,” Luke said. “Every boy needs two Daddies.” ■

Story by David May Illustration by Domino

Tod, like most of his friends, slummed.

He got drunk and had sex with men he wanted nothing to do with once he'd wiped their cum from his face or flushed the rubber down the toilet.

But unlike his friends, Tod would talk about the joys of "delving into the leeches of the unwashed masses." His ~~idea~~ about sex had cruel twists to do—erbed repounders that enraged his trucks (his "victims," he called them), leading them on to new heights of sexual fury. That he left the men who fucked him wounded was of little concern to Tod. Unmovable himself, it never occurred to him that others could be moved, or even hurt, as he beckoned them closer with one hand and pushed them away with the other.

While Tod's friends fucked in the beds of men who lived by their sweat, had tattoos, or even wore dungarees to work, in the end they coupled with each other, set up house together, and held elaborate dinner parties. Tod was disgusted by this incestuousness and announced that he had no use for romancing his own kind or for justifying his preference for working men. To his friends it had been sowing wild oats, but to Tod it was a vocation. He needed these men and their untapped rage (rage he felt lurking beneath their amiable facades) to match it with his own cruelty. Because he not only "liked a bit of rough" (as his friends called it), he liked to be mistreated by these men he cared so little for, and he did whatever was necessary to make himself the target of their anger.

"Where did you go to school?" Tod asked a construction worker, a man with massive callused hands that Tod hoped would smack him on the side of his head.

"Here in the city. Mission High."

"No, no. I meant college."

"You're a smart-ass, you know that? Let me show what a smart-ass is for."

The construction worker raped Tod's ass (after fucking his face and forcing Tod to choke on his own bile) in retaliation.

Sore and bleeding the next day, Tod smiled when he told his friends, "I knew I struck gold when I saw, not one, but two lava lamps in his living room."

He and his friends cackled over Tod's coldness. Then they sipped their whiskey and sodas, their gin and tonics, and went on to disparage, just loud enough to be heard, the out-of-towners with fizzy pink drinks at the end of the bar.

Tod held back from going to the leather bars because, as he confided to his psychiatrist, "I don't want a fantasy. I want them to fucking hurt me for real. What's the matter with that?" His analyst only grunted and asked Tod, once again, about his early childhood. But eventually Tod realized that if he wanted to get hurt he'd have better luck at the bars South of Market. What he had not counted on when he got there (wearing dirty tennis shoes, jeans, and a plain white T-shirt) was the overabundance of bottoms, all of them equally hungry for the same combination of love and abuse. Tod sneered inwardly at their neediness as he looked around for the man without affectation, for the genuine article. The bar was populated with obviously middle-class men dressed as bikers. He knew their faces from downtown, knew them to be waiters, bankers, word processors, accountants. What Tod wanted was someone he would never see downtown outside of a construction site.

He let an hour pass, downing several beers while he waited. Finally, when he was about to leave, his eyes skated over a pair of boots that looked real. These boots weren't shiny and clean like the rest of the boots in the bar; they were dirty, greasy, and well-worn. The man wearing them was in torn blue jeans, a stained T-shirt, and an equally worn leather jacket. His curly hair needed cutting, and he had several days' worth of scruffy beard covering an adequately handsome face. Tod thought the stubble might be put on for effect, and looked closely at the man's hands for reassurance. The hands were rough, callused, the fingernails worn short but unable to hide the black grease ground beneath them.

Their eyes met a moment and Tod approached.

"Can I buy you a beer?"

The man looked him over a moment, then snarled, "I don't think so."

Confronted to rejection, Tod panicked. What man, especially one like this, wouldn't be flattered by his approach? Tod was tall, fair, good-looking, and went to the gym (the same gym as all his friends) three times a week. Who was this man who rejected him? Tod was certain there was some sort of misunderstanding.

"My name's Tod," he said, offering his hand.

"So?"

Tod was trembling now, his hand shaking in mudair where he had hoped to make contact with this stranger's work-hardened paw. He brought his hand back to his side.

"What do you want, mister?"

Tod met the man's eyes, swallowed hard, and told the truth for the first time.

"I hurt me."

"That's what I thought." He spat a wad into Tod's face, smiled as he watched his spit dribble down Tod's cheek. "No. I don't think so."

He walked away. Tod watched him walk away and knew with a certainty he'd never felt before, having felt very little of anything in his life, that he was in love. He followed the stranger out of the Lone Star Saloon, watched him mount his bike and drive off with a roar.

Tod caught his breath, ran for his car, and pursued.

It was not a long drive, and a few minutes later Tod following him up the narrow stairs of the Night Gallery sex club. Tod searched the maze of dimly-lit rooms, and finally found him standing in a dark corner, one hand resting on his crotch, the other in a belt loop. Tod dropped to his knees and pressed his mouth against the threadbare denim, felt the cock move beneath the cloth, felt two strong hands grab the back of his head. Tod reached for the buttons of his fly and felt a boot pressing against his balls before he could undo them.

"I don't want a fantasy. I want them to fucking hurt me for real. What's the matter with that?"

"No one said you could taste my boner, blonde. No one said you could even touch me. But you're a persistent little cocksucker. What are you willing to do for that dick?" He grabbed a handful of hair and pulled Tod's head back. Tod didn't cry out, but breathed in, sharply, and looked up into the man's face, into the angry eyes.

"Anything."

"Yeah, right."

His booted foot pressed hard on Tod's crotch. Tod inhaled sharply again. Then the man backed off a second, looking down on Tod as if considering something. He grabbed his crotch, his hard dick visible through the worn denim, as if daring Tod to follow, and walked away. Tod ran after him, catching up with him outside. He was leaning against the wall, looking straight ahead at nothing.

"You want it bad, don't you, faggot?"

Tod nodded, his mouth dry. He heard footsteps coming down the street in the soft drizzle. The stranger looked down the street at the approaching people, smiled, and said, "Kiss my boot."

Tod dropped to his knees and obeyed. When the people had passed, Tod felt himself being pulled by his hair again. When he looked up at the man, a gloved hand smacked his face four or five times. Hard. Tod's ears rang.

The man walked away, turning down the alley. Tod followed again. In the back of the alley, Tod was forced to his knees, his face ground into the man's crotch.

"Now you can suck it."

A moment later Tod felt the thick, dick harden between his lips, lengthen as it pushed its way down his throat. The man grabbed a handful of hair in each fist and fucked. Tod choked, swallowed, gagged, but refused to resist. Tears filled his eyes. A mixture of slobber and bitter fluid from his aching stomach spilled over his chin as the man approached orgasm. He felt the dick head swell before it was pulled rudely from his mouth and cum splattered across his face. He licked the cum from around his mouth as best he could.

The booted foot once again pressed against his crotch.

"You've got a hard-on, you fucking pervert!"

Tod nodded. "Yeah."

Tod felt the sting of the stranger's hand across his face again. He groaned as he felt his cock explode in his jeans, felt the wetness expand as it covered his crotch and soiled the boot still pressing against his helpless cock and balls.

"You call me Sir, you fucking faggot."

"Okay, Sir. I mean, yes, Sir."

"You got my boot dirty, you fucking pervert. Lick it clean."

Tod wordlessly obeyed.

"You know, you're not bad for a wussie sweater queen. We might make a man of you yet."

Tod lifted his face from the boot and looked up at the man, his eyes brimming over with the same hope he'd seen in the eyes of the men at the bar, the hope he'd been so contemptuous of an hour ago.

"Damn, you pansies are all the same. Mess you up and you'll follow a guy anywhere," the man said, tucking his dick back into his jeans. "See you around, queer boy."

"Where? When?"

"What was that?"

"Sir!"

"What's your number?"

Tod told him, offering him one of his cards

"You really are a little piece of yuppie scum, aren't you? With your little faggy calling cards, I bet you think you're just too smart for words?"

"No, I just—"

"Skip it, queen. I'll call you when I want you. If I want you. In the meantime, why don't you just stay there on your knees and wait for someone else who feels like fucking your pathetic, pretty-boy face. But don't count on it."

Tod stayed where he was for hours, getting up and leaving only when the police came by and told him to move along.

He woke up the next afternoon with a raging hard-on. He thought of the man who had abused him the night before as he stroked himself. He'd already forgotten that he'd fallen in love. Instead of thinking about the (still nameless) man he loved, he thought of being the object of other acts of violence he craved. After shooting a wad across his flat stomach, Tod called his friends to tell them about the sexy stranger, to show them the bruise on the side of his face where he'd been backhanded. He admired the bruise in the mirror for some time, relishing how shocked his friends would be.

Weeks later, Tod had left his apartment and was crossing the street to Buena Vista Park when a motorcycle came to a loud stop. A familiar voice called his name. Tod approached the man with trepidation. Beneath the helmet, Tod recognized the eyes, filled with scorn and amusement. Tod's dick was hard.

"If it isn't fuck face himself."

"How are you?"

"What was that, fuck face?"

Tod swallowed hard. "How are you, Sir?"

"Not bad. Horny. You live here, cocksucker?"

"Yes. I mean, yes, Sir."

"Your lucky day, faggot. I'm gonna give you some dick."

Wordlessly, Tod led the man inside. "What's your name, Sir?" he asked in the elevator.

"Stu. But you call me Sir like a good boy. It keeps my dick hard."

"Yes, Sir."

Stu grabbed a handful of Tod's hair and, for the first time, kissed him, fucking Tod's face with his tongue. The elevator stopped, and Stu pushed Tod out into the hall ahead of him, holding on to his hair.

"You like being hurt, don't you, boy?" Stu demanded once they were in Tod's apartment and Stu had thrown Tod onto the floor by his hair.

"Yes, Sir!"

"Do you think I fucking care if you like it? I'm gonna mess you up, cocksucker. And fuck you at both ends, I'm just here to get myself off, not make you happy."

Tod cowered inwardly and Stu struck him hard across the face. Then Stu took off his belt and told Tod to stand up, drop his pants, and grab his ankles. The belt whistled in the air as it struck Tod's ass, cut into the white flesh leaving it red and raw. Tod refused to react. He held steady, his muscles tensed against the assault. Sweat dripped down over his body. Then he felt the hard dick between his butt cheeks.

"I'm being a real nice guy today. I'm wearing a lubricated condom. Next time you'll just have to take it dry."

Stu fucked and Tod gritted his teeth. Tears filled his eyes and fell to the floor with the tiny pools of sweat that puddled the floor around them. He heard Stu grunt, felt the heat of his raped ass spread through his whole body. He knew he'd cum without touching himself in moments, knew that Stu's assault was what he wanted more than anything in the world.

He remembered that he was in love with Stu.

When Stu came, whipping Tod's ass with his belt as he fucked it, he screamed so loud that Tod was afraid his neighbors would call the police. Then he was pushed away, Stu's fat dick pulled out as roughly as it was inserted. Tod stumbled and fell to the floor.

"Come on, faggot, get up and get me a beer. Then you can get down here and suck my cock. I think I've got another load for you, maybe even two more."

Later, after Stu had taken time out to beat Tod with his closed fists and fuck Tod's face, he relaxed over another beer, half-smiling and half-sneering at his enamored companion. Tod, for his part, sat on the floor and admired his new lover from across the room. Tod's clothes had been torn off in the preceding hour, his face and body covered with bruises. Teeth marks now covered his neck, and his ass was a mass of bloody welts.

"Hey, little fucker, come here."

Tod approached on his knees.

"Your pretty blond hair is messed up, pussy face." Then he hit Tod again across the face and stood up. "I've got to piss."

And, since his dick was still out of his pants, he pissed on Tod, pissed over his upturned, bruised face. Tod came with a cry, his cum mixing with Stu's urine as it covered Tod's precious hardwood floors.

"You're one sick pervert, dude. You get off on being pissed on in your own living room. One sick faggot." He smiled, amused at the sight of the disheveled, piss-covered Tod. "Anyway, I've got to go now." He buttoned up his jeans.

Tod followed him to the door, and for the second time Stu kissed him. Then slapped him hard across the face for good measure.

"I had a good time, pansy pants? So did I. Maybe I'll call you."

"Thanks. Thank you, Sir."

"Yeah, right." Stu gave Tod an affectionate slap on the ass, and then he bounded down the stairs.

Tod searched for Stu for weeks, but wasn't sure where to look. He went back to the Lone Star, back to the Night Gallery, searched the alleys and scanned construction sites for a glimpse of Stu. He resented Stu the whole time he searched for him. He resented the control Stu had over him, resented his own need and desire for Stu. He had no one to confide in except his psychiatrist. "Being in love," Tod screamed to his empty apartment in frustration, "is fucked!"

A few weeks later Tod attended a summer solstice party, an annual orgy so expansive (spreading itself over three floors of a rambling Victorian) that it impressed even Tod's jaded sensibilities. Tod wandered through the maze of rooms doing his best to look unimpressed. Then he saw (as he half-knew he would) Stu standing in a dark corner getting his dick sucked. Tod watched as Stu gently fucked the other man's mouth, spoke soft encouragement to him, stroked his hair. Tod ached for Stu's touch. He trembled within as he watched, but did nothing. And when their eyes met and Stu smiled, Tod tried to walk by as if he hadn't been watching, as if he hadn't seen Stu with this other man.

"Get back here, faggot."

Caught looking, and feeling like a guilty child, he approached Stu meekly, unable to deny his need for him. Stu grabbed his face and kissed him. He kept Tod in a lip lock, breathing hard, as he came in the other man's mouth.

Finally releasing Tod from his kiss, Stu smacked him once across the face and smiled.

"You get upstairs and wait for me in the kitchen while I thank this man properly."

Tod obeyed with a nod, turning around only once to see Stu gently kissing the mouth he'd just fucked, stroking the man's dick. Feeling a confusion of anger and hurt well within him, he hurried out of the basement and up the stairs. As he waited for Stu, he planned what to do, what to say. He could pull Stu down just like all the other men who'd fucked him. Or could he? Unlike those other men, Stu had given him nothing to look onto, nothing to throw in his face to raise his ire. Stu had given him only the pain he wanted and was now willing to beg for, nothing else. Now Tod knew Stu was also capable of tenderness, and he wanted that as well, wanted all of Stu.

Stu walked into the kitchen and Tod sank to his knees, buried his face in Stu's familiar threadbare dungarees, inhaled the sweet-bitter smell of cum, sweat and grease. He felt Stu's hand gently stroke his hair, heard Stu gently ask him, "Does this boy want Daddy to take care of him tonight?" Tod nodded, looked up half-expecting the familiar slap across his face. Instead, Stu stuck his thumb in Tod's mouth. To Tod's own wonderment, he sucked on the thumb, Daddy's thumb, looked up at Stu and saw not the amused scorn he was accustomed to, but a genuine smile.

"Yeah, I think this boy learned his lesson."

"Yes, Sir. I learned my lesson, Sir." Surprised at his own words, Tod added, "I'll be a good boy, Sir."

"And you need your daddy tonight, don't you, boy? You want to make your daddy happy?"

"Yes, Sir." Then he swallowed hard and said the word: "Daddy."

Stu smiled and pulled him to his feet, kissed him, caressed him, slapped his ass.

"I think we need get back downstairs, baby, so Daddy can do it right."

They found a nook where could lay down together. Stu gave Tod that mixture of love and abuse he'd seen others crave, that he wanted so much for himself now. The familiar slaps were now mixed with the less familiar kisses and caresses. Tod saw the pleasure in Stu's face, saw the kind of man he was. Seeking to please him, Tod buried his face in Stu's crotch, took the thick cock down his throat and sucked. He let the cock slide in and out of his mouth, used his tongue to caress the head as it passed his lips.

"Baby," Stu moaned.

A moment later Tod's face was buried in a pile of pillows while Stu's cock sawed in and out of his ass. Stu held Tod down one second, slapped his ass the next, then he laid on top of him murmuring, "Baby, baby, baby..." as he fucked Tod's ass faster and harder. Tod cried out as he came. Stu's fat dick pushed the cum out of his balls, forcing him to shoot almost against his will onto the mattress. Stu pounded into him again, screamed his orgasm seconds after Tod came.

Stu pulled out of him, showed him the cum-filled rubber, and laughed as he tied it into a knot. Then he laid down next to Tod, the sweat from their bodies letting them slide cleanly against each other. Tod licked the sweat from Stu's face. Stu kissed him.

"Yeah," said Stu gently. "This is one boy who needs his daddy."

FETISH I: PUMPS

Two pump-freaks, Dixon Duffly and Randy Howell in a marathon dick and 11 suction session. These dedicated pumpmen work out with manual and electric buddy connections and Dixon uses a series of cylinders to blow his fat dick and meaty ballsac up to mammoth proportions. Get out your pumps and PUMP IT UP!

FETISH II: CATHETERS

Demented daddy Jack Cummings can stuff the most amazing things down his piss hole. A master of urethral stimulation, he shoves 40 ball bearings into his dick tube, ramrods them down with a 3/8" steel rod and, cannon like, shoots his load AND the 40 balls bearings. The electrostimulation scene will shock your socks off. He attaches terminals to his nuts and jerks off while shoving an electrified probe down his dick hole.

FETISH III: FOOT WORSHIP

Sweaty engineer's boots, smelly work boots, stinking paratrooper boots, beer-soaked motorcycle boots. He sniffs them, tongues them, kisses them, worships them all. He licks his master's boots clean, buries his nose in his filthy, sweaty socks, peels them off and slips into a feeding frenzy of smelly toes and dirty soles. Alone in a sea of boots, he shoots his load.

SEND US YOUR PHOTO & GET INTO DRUMMER'S TOUGH CUSTOMERS

Are you tough enough to become a Drummer Tough Customer?

To prove it just send us a black and white photo of yourself (hopefully in a provocative pose) so we can show you off in an upcoming Tough Customers issue. Make sure to print your name and address on the back of the photo along with a signed statement that you are of legal age.

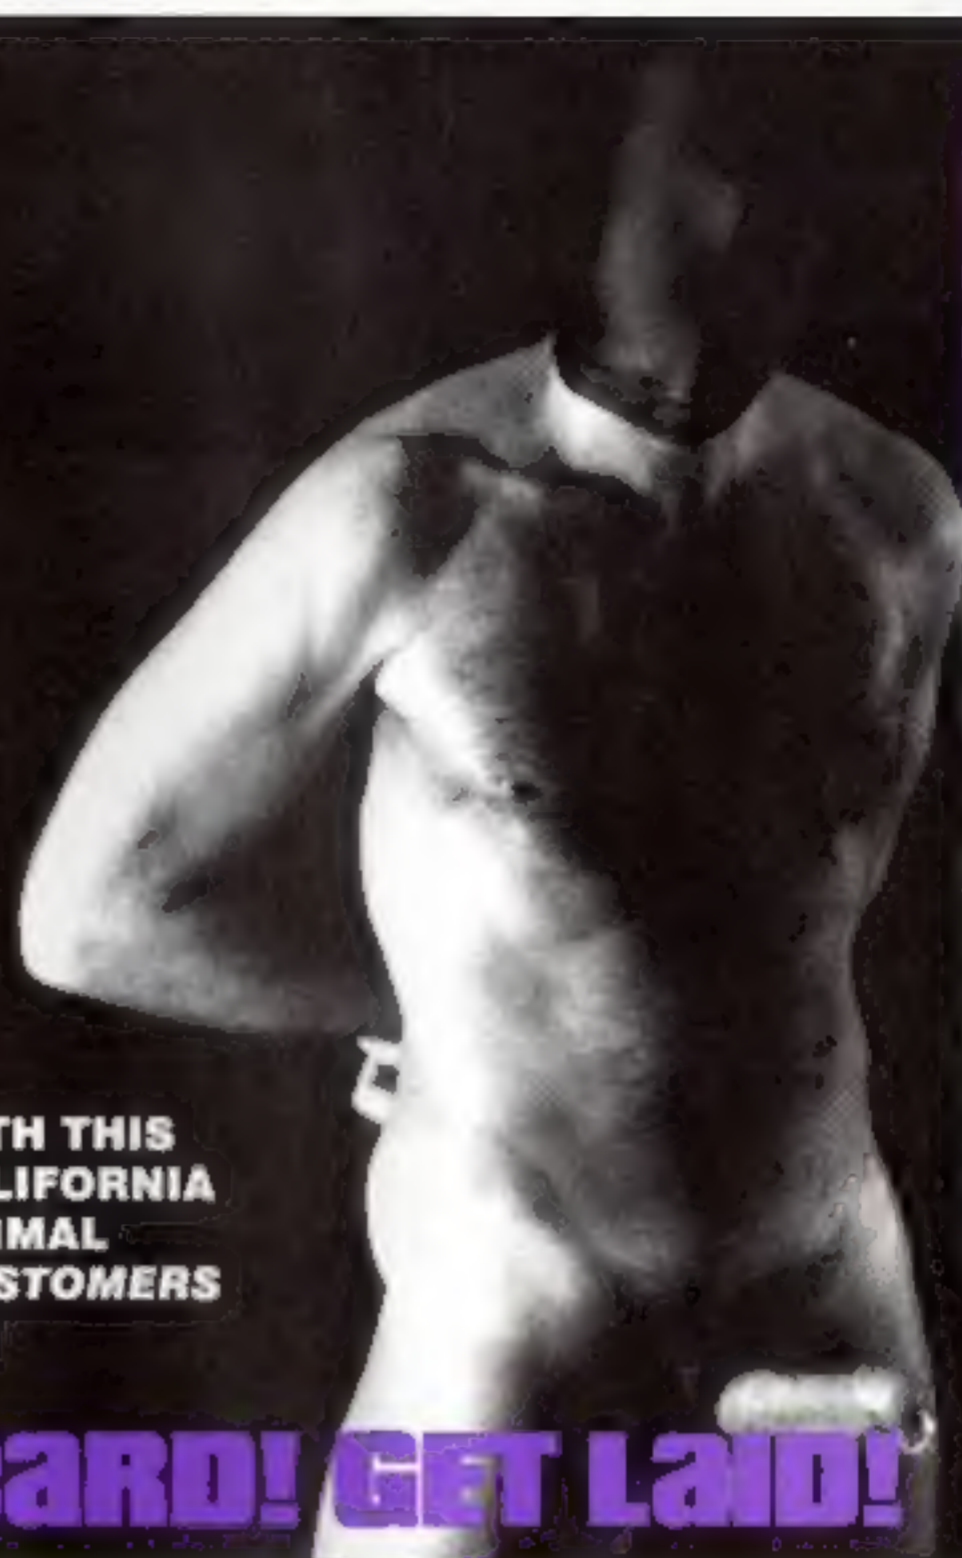

You may include your address for publication, or we will assign you a confidential TC Box #.

Having your photo in our Tough Customers magazine is one of the greatest ways to meet other Drummer men with your interests — from all over the world.

- We cannot show penetration.
- Photos cannot be returned.
- Please send photos to:
